13. Investment risks

- 13.1 The Client acknowledges that:
- the rates, revenues and appreciation achieved by the individual financial instruments in past may in no way serve as an indicator or warranty of future rates, revenues and appreciation of financial instruments, and those rates, revenues and appreciation of financial instruments that are or may be the subject of the Client's orders may change over time;
 - financial instruments in foreign currencies are exposed to the effect of changes in foreign exchange rates. These currency rates may have a positive and negative impact on their revenues or their appreciation in other currencies;
 - the availability / marketability of financial instruments may vary and therefore it may be difficult to buy / sell a particular financial instrument according to the given order;
 - investing in financial instruments is generally related to risks arising from the nature of the particular financial instrument, the movements in its rate, the movements in exchange rates and the laws applicable in each country;
 - the validity of the options is limited by the date of the expiration, which means that if the option is not executed or sold until the expiration date, then it completely loses its value;
 - using of derivatives is usually connected to the leverage effect that increases the riskiness of the Client's portfolio.
- 13.2 When trading with leverage, the Client is required to consider the specific risks that arise from this trading method. The Client acknowledges that.
- it is possible to lose more of his own means than the amount initially entered into the Trade on Loan/Lending. The decline / increase in the rates of financial instruments purchased on the Loan or the borrowed financial instruments may imply the need to submit additional money to the Broker if the Client wishes to prevent the forced sale of his financial instruments;
 - The Broker may sell/buy financial instruments from the Client's account also without the consent of the Client under the terms and conditions agreed in the Contract. If the Client's own funds on the Client's account fall below some amount (Margin call, Stop loss) securing the Loan, the Broker may sell financial instruments from the Client's account to cover the difference. The Broker may, if contractually agreed, sell/purchase financial instruments from the account/to the Client's account without being obliged to inform the Client in advance;

- c) he has no right to extend the period for securing the Loan/Lending. Under certain conditions, there may be an extension of the period in which the Client has to meet the requirements of securing the Loan/Lending, however, the Client is not entitled to get the extension and it always depends on the Broker's discretion;
- d) it is necessary to pay constant attention when trading with leverage. In the event that the value of the Client's financial instruments securing leverage is reduced, the Broker recommends the Client to sell selected financial instruments of his own choice in time, or to add sufficient funds to his/her Client's account and to avoid the forced sale of financial instruments and the closing the positions by Broker;
- e) leverage effect occurs when trading with Loan, while the Client delivers only part of the funds needed to close the deal but takes full account of the losses/profits from the transaction. Using the leverage effect increases the risk of client portfolios;
- f) In the course of trading with leverage, the Client is obliged to always repay the principal and interest, even if the value of his purchased financial instruments is reduced sharply. The size of the cost when trading with leverage is determined by two factors in particular: how much the Client will borrow and for how long;
- g) If he / she wants to trade with leverage, he / she should always carefully examine, consider and analyze all the other risks outlined above arising from this trading method. In the event of any doubt, the Client should consult with the Broker any matter concerning this trading method. If the Client is not fully aware of the Principles of trading with leverage, he should not use this trading method.

15.3 In the event that the closing price of the security on the regulated market can not be determined, the theoretical price shall be used to determine its price. The basis for the valuation of these financial instruments is the principle of calculating the present value of cash-flow, using the basic financial mathematical procedures.

15.4 In the case of a security denominated in a currency other than the currency of the euro, the conversion using a valid exchange rate of the relevant foreign currency declared by the National Bank of Slovakia (NBS) on the date of its valuation shall be used for its valuation purposes.

15.5 For the purpose of valuation of cash, its value is determined as a balance on the Client's subaccount on the valuation date.
